The Mental Art of Hitting

Coaches and players alike can benefit from the teachings and lessons of Tony Rico and his staff. This clinic will focus on not only the physical art of hitting, but the mental aspect as well. You may already know how to swing a bat, but that it is only a very small part of winning the battle between you and the pitcher or overcoming adversity in a game situation. Tony teaches most major Division I colleges all over the country on the mental aspect of hitting. See why these players are able to separate themselves from the rest and rise to the top. Learn how to prepare for greatness. Become the "Hunter" and not the "Hunted". The often overlooked and most important aspect of hitting is mental preparation. Start taking steps in becoming the complete player and distance yourself from the rest. As in life, you'll learn that by making good decisions you'll be successful. Each pitch is a chance for you to make a good decision. Learn how to prepare yourself to make those good choices and decisions. You've been training your body for this sport, now complete yourself as an athlete and train your mind as well. Learn how the great players of our time became great and continue to perform at the highest level even to this day. Contact the Ballpark at Farmingdale at the address below for more information. Schedules and fees to be announced shortly.
